

Swordfish Import Monitoring Program

National Marine Fisheries Service
Office of Sustainable Fisheries
Highly Migratory Species Management Division
Silver Spring, Maryland

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

In 1995 the International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas (ICCAT), adopted an alternative minimum size for Atlantic swordfish and a ban on the sale of undersized Atlantic swordfish. The National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), under authority of the Atlantic Tunas Convention Act (ATCA), 16 U.S.C. 971 et seq., has issued the following regulations.

To facilitate enforcement of the domestic minimum size (33 pounds, dressed weight), NMFS has prohibited the import of undersized Atlantic swordfish into the United States of America.

This new program will facilitate the tracking of swordfish shipments into the United States of America and the enforcement of ICCAT minimum size requirements, and will provide information on international swordfish harvesting and trade activities.

PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS

The import restrictions for swordfish:

1. Prohibit the import of Atlantic swordfish or swordfish pieces weighing less than 33 pounds dressed weight (15 kilograms) into the United States, unless accompanied by a COE that indicates the pieces are derived from a swordfish above the minimum size;
2. Require dealer permitting and reporting for importation into the United States of swordfish from any source; and
3. Require a Certificate of Eligibility (COE) to accompany all swordfish shipments imported into the United States.

DEALER REQUIREMENTS

A dealer that buys Atlantic swordfish only from U.S. fishing vessels must:

- Obtain Swordfish Dealer Permit;

and

- Send Bi-weekly Dealer Report on purchases from vessels to appropriate NMFS office for processing.

This pamphlet was prepared in September 2000 to provide interested importers a summary of the Atlantic Swordfish Import Monitoring Program. Refer to official regulations for a complete description. Since fishery rules are subject to change, importers must familiarize themselves with the latest regulations and are responsible for complying with current official regulations.
